Talking the Talk- Walking the Walk, Role Plays

Crossing Guard

There is a school crossing guard and a student in this role-play.

At the end of every day, the crossing guard is in charge of making sure vehicles stop and people cross safely. One day, the guard sees a student run across the street without looking and before the guard signals to the cars to stop. Role play what the guard and student talk about after the incident.

Peer Leader

There is a student your age (Jose) and 1st grade student.

Jose has been asked by a teacher he had in 1st grade to come talk to his class about pedestrian safety. Act out what Jose will share with the students and how the students respond.

Helping Out

There is a student and senior citizen in this role-play.

The student (Courtney) and a senior citizen (Joe) at a crosswalk. Joe is blind and needs help crossing the street. Act out the conversation between Courtney and Joe so that they cross safely.

Sister

There is a boy your age (Jamil) and his 4-year old sister, Maria in this role-play.

Jamil and his 4-year old sister Maria are playing with a ball in the front yard. It rolls into the street. Maria is about to run after the ball. Act out what Jamil teaches Maria about running after balls in the street.

Today, I learned I can help others to be safe pedestrians by:

Lesson 5:

You Can Walk Too!

You are designing a safe walking route from one location in your town to another. Pick a starting place and an ending place. Draw the route on the space provided on page 11. Make sure to include landmarks along the way and arrows for the directions. It might help to put street names in.

Do You Live Close Enough to Walk or Bike to School?

- Yes. Then draw your route to school on the back of this page.
- No. Where do you walk? Draw the route to someplace you walk in your neighborhood.

Stuff to include in your drawing:

Roads

Traffic

Crosswalks

Sidewalks

Stoplights

Others?

List two benefits that walking provides for your body:

List one environmental benefit of walking:
